Chapter 1

Contributing

Contributing is easy. Get a GitHub account if you don't have it already and clone this repository with the "↵ Fork" button in the top right corner of this page. Check out your clone to your machine, code away, push your changes to your clone and submit a pull request; instructions are available at <https://help.github.com/articles/fork-a-repo>. (In case you need them, more detailed instructions for creating pull requests are at <https://help.github.com/articles/using-pull-requests>, and a basic guide to GitHub is at <https://guides.github.com/activities/hello-world/>.)

It's likely that we won't merge your code right away, and we'll ask for some changes instead. Don't be discouraged! That's normal; the library is complex, and thus it might take some time to become familiar with it and to use it in an idiomatic way.

We're looking forward to your contributions.
